

MYJAR Announced as a FStech Awards Finalist

The award-winning online instalment loan provider MYJAR has been shortlisted for further recognition of Consumer Finance Product of the Year, as a finalist in the FStech Awards competing against the likes of nimbl and LV=.

MYJAR is an innovative financial services company that provides flexible online loans of up to £3,600 for up to 12 months. MYJAR pride themselves on being there for their customers when they need them the most. They have devised an efficient and well recognised online system for loan applications, which has simplified the products they offer to customers through their MYJAR Ladder.

Stuart Sykes, Group Customer Operations Director at MYJAR said; “It is a tremendous achievement for our company to reach the final of such a prestigious Award. This brings the total to 6 nominations and 1 win in the past few months alone for MYJAR and reflects both our growth and development of our product.”

Tom Newbould, MYJAR’s Chief Marketing Officer, added: “We are delighted to be announced as a finalist for the FStech Awards which illustrates that not only are we a recognised brand within our immediate industry, but also the wider financial service sector for innovation and technology as well as responsible lending.”

Now into its 17th year, the FStech Awards recognises excellence and innovation in the field of information technology within the UK and EMEA financial services sector. Winning entries come from financial services institutions and technology suppliers who are leading the way in such areas as social media, customer service, compliance, mobile, online, systems integration, outsourcing and data governance.

The awards are independently judged and the winners will be announced at the FStech Awards Gala Dinner & Ceremony on 23 March 2017 at the London Marriott Hotel, Grosvenor Square.
